

KATA JEWELLERY

From Heirloom to Everyday

We all have those pieces tucked away in our jewellery box – you know the ones. They sit quietly at the back, treasured heirlooms we could never bear to part with, yet rarely, if ever, wear. Whether it's a grandmother's ring, a brooch passed down through generations or a necklace that no longer suits our style, these pieces hold far more than their material value. They carry memories, family history and the stories of the people we love.

But what if there was a way to honour that heritage while giving these cherished treasures a new lease of life? Imagine transforming inherited jewellery into something you will wear and enjoy every day, without losing the sentiment that makes it so special.

For the past four years, KATA Jewellery on St. John's Road, Tunbridge Wells, has been helping clients do exactly that. Alongside expert repairs, alterations and bespoke commissions, jewellery remodelling has become one of its most sought-after services.

It's easy to understand why. Jennifer Kata appreciates that remodelling inherited jewellery is about far more than creating a beautiful new piece. It is an emotional process that requires sensitivity, creativity and trust. Every design begins with the client's story, ensuring the finished piece reflects their personality while preserving the memories and meaning behind the original jewellery.

Too often, inherited treasures are remodelled into designs that all share the same look, shaped by a jeweller's signature style rather than the individual wearing them. As bespoke jewellers, KATA Jewellery takes a different approach.

Every remodelled piece is thoughtfully designed from scratch, making each creation completely unique.

When making such an important decision, choosing the right jeweller matters. You need someone you can trust to guide you through the process, craft your jewellery with exceptional skill and, above all, treat your treasured heirlooms with the care and respect they deserve. At KATA Jewellery, remodelling is about more than creating something new – it's about preserving the past while creating a piece you'll treasure for generations to come. ■
